Michigan Potash Company presents at the 2018 Governor's Summit on Extractive Industries

On February 13, 2018, Michigan Potash Company (MPC) presented at the Governor's Summit on Extractive Industries. The summit holds an active discussion to increase awareness of the state's extractive industries as valuable building blocks to Michigan's future. Talking points include the state's workforce, education opportunities, investment and growth, and collaborative partnerships between industries, communities and government.

Theodore Pagano, P.E., G., CEO of Michigan Potash Company LLC, presented at the summit to bring awareness to their projects and the importance of potash. "Potash is necessary for food production. It is necessary for all forms of life, it sustains the grower, and it is the tightest controlled commodity in the world. Without potash there is no grower, and without our grower, the entire economy that surrounds him, waivers, stagnates, falters, and fails."

About Michigan Potash Company:

Michigan Potash Company, LLC is a private, US based, potash company responsibly controlling the over 150 million tons of recoverable K₂O product in the US cornbelt, leading America into a new era of sustainable, low cost, domestic potash production.
